o'clock this morning, but it was with-and a melody sent in an alarm, although the blaze was a hundred feet away from Mr. Parker's house. Firemen went out with an engine but found nothing to do. It was only fourteen minutes from the bell tap

THE MISSING MINORITY'S RE- PORT.

Editor BULLETIN:—

The Biennial Report of the President of the Board of Education appears to be a valuable document.
The numerous exact figures are very interesting and they prove that the Board of Education and its assistants are in earnest to advance the school business in the whole country. I should be sorry to distract anything from the praises mentioned in the report; but, as to the general tendency of the document, it is evidently one-sided. Everything is in favor of the Government Public schools. The Independent schools are, more or less, treated as a disagreeable obstacle; their decrease is considered as a victory of the Board. But a very small class finds mercy. The Hon. President deserves thanks for the undisguised expression of his views, therefore it is to be hoped that he will not be offended if I speak with the same frankness of "the other side of the question."

Not being blessed with political power nor with a large fortune, I must content myself with exposing my views; these are based on reason. In my opinion, the Independent schools ought not to be treated so spitefully; they ought to be have a reasonable share in the public money spent for education, because:

1. The Independent schools work for the education of youth as well as the Public schools.

2. The state-monopoly in educational matters is a modern system of communistic tendency and a social heresy, since the parents have the first obligation and therefore the first right to provide for the education of their children—by natural and by divine law—and it is the practical notion of all parents (with very rare exceptions) in behalf of their own children.

3. Serious Christians, of whatsoever denominations (if they profess a determined creed and believe in it), feel bound in conscience to prefer an independent school of their own creed to the public schools, on account of the absence of the most essential branch of education—religious training—in the latter.

The liberty of conscience in connection with the school-question requires a few words of explanation.
Enlightened religious people do not think that the public schools in this kingdom, when managed according to the rules prescribed by the Board (which is not always the case though), are positively bad, but they are very defective in spite of the best intention of the Board; hence, in localities where no con-fessional school is available, parents are not only allowed to send their children to the public schools but they are even obliged to do so because an imperfect schooling is better than none at all. But in places where a good school of their own creed is available, they would act against their conscience if they sent their children to the godless public school.

The Hon. President thinks that only a small number of children abstain from patronizing (?) the public schools for conscience sake. I beg leave to disagree with him.
Still, let that be as it may. The main question at issue is: Are there parents who send their children to public schools against the dictates of their conscience? And what is the cause? If all men were perfectly intelligent and disposed to lose and suffer anything rather than to go against the dictates of their conscience, to please God more than men, to prefer the good of the soul to that of the body, to prefer a happy eternity to the greatest temporal benefit; supposing this, nobody would betray his own soul by delivering his children to a school which his conscience disapproves. But this is an ideal which we cannot expect to be realized as a general rule. Human frailty is such that many a man, otherwise good, reluctantly yields to the temptation by the consideration of some real or imaginary temporal benefit. Such a temptation frequently lies heavy upon poor people who can scarcely earn their living by constant hard labor. Now, the public schools are free while the independent schools are left to their own resources. Even if they charge a reasonable fee the poor man cannot afford to pay it; if they depend upon private charity they are in danger of lingering in a starving condition. This seems to be the wish of the "Reporter."

Is this liberty? Yes, it is liberty in theory; the means to use it are withheld and consequently there is no practical liberty. The law is the same for all classes; still it affects the poor class and one particular religious denomination more than other classes. The fact is evident; but such was not and is not the intention of the law-makers. Let us hope that the present Legislature will find means to alleviate the hardship weighing principally upon the poor classes in reference to independent schools. E. O.
June 25, 1890.
